Genoa Hosts Final 2010 Open Air Market

Downtown Genoa is thinking Fall and that means time to look for bargains in Halloween and Thanksgiving items and get a start of your Christmas shopping at the final Open Air Market for 2010.

Nearly three-dozen vendors will be on hand with a wide range of products, gift items and more for shoppers at the corner of Main and Genoa Streets. Also vendors are expected to be on offering plants and flowers, crafts, flea market finds, antiques, resale goods, artwork, jewelry and many other items.

In addition, Genoa Main Street will be taking orders for holiday greenery including wreaths, roping and more, for pickup on Saturday, November 20. Proceeds from the greenery sale go to fund downtown improvements. In the past, proceeds have been used for the ice skating rink and the Main Street Park.

The great variety makes this a fun market to visit," says Mim Evans, Genoa Main Street executive director. Genoa Main Street, Inc. coordinates the monthly markets.

"The prime location on Rt. 72 means that over 10,000 cars will pass by the market on an average day. It's a great opportunity for farmers, home based businesses or individuals to reach the public," Evans adds. "The markets are the place to make some extra cash as a seller or save some cash as a buyer. That's a help in a tough economy."
